

Lily was a small, friendly dog who loved exploring new places. She was curious, playful and always happy to meet new friends.

One day, while walking in the park, Lily heard a soft meow. She looked around and found a little kitten stuck on a high rock. The kitten looked scared and could not get down.

“Don’t worry,” said Lily in a gentle voice. “I will help you!”

Lily barked and called for a nearby gardener. Together, they carefully helped the kitten down from the rock. The little kitten felt safe and happy.

“Thank you, Lily!” said the kitten. “You are so brave!”

Lily smiled. “Being brave means helping others, even when you feel a little afraid,” she said.

From that day on, Lily and the kitten became good friends. Lily learned that courage is not about being big or strong — it is about doing the right thing and helping others.
